Dear FCC Representative,

It has come to my attention that a different type of broadcasting is being considered that would take precedence over the current FM translator service. If this is allowed, I would lose my two most important and most-listened to stations in my area (as well as in my extended family's area).

My family listens to K-LOVE and KGBI (as well as KROA when traveling) on a daily basis in our home and watch almost no television. We rely on our radio station for musical entertainment throughout the day, to keep us informed of up-to-the-minute news events (local, national and international), local community and church events, and weather and traffic information. We listen to the talk programs that offer information not available on commercial radio stations, including financial, medical and spiritual programs. We find most of the music on the other FM stations to be offensive and not appropriate for our young child to listen to, which is why we have chosen K-LOVE as our family's radio station. We believe it is a safe alternative that we can leave on throughout the day without being concerned about its effects upon our daughter. We also appreciate the commercial-free format.

If the K-LOVE (and any other publicly funded) translator stations are not given precedence above the LPFM stations, we will no longer be able to receive K-LOVE's signal, and will no longer receive the above-mentioned information and programming. This will also affect nearly all of our friends who also listen to K-LOVE.

I am asking that you keep the translator stations as having higher precedence than the LPFM stations so that we are able to continue receiving the K-LOVE signal.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Sincerely,
